

Chronic Strategies of Disconnection Inventory

Chronic strategies of disconnection are patterns of behaviour that we may develop to protect ourselves from hurt or anxiety in close relationships, but which may now be redundant: i.e., we tend to do them automatically when, in fact, it may be more beneficial for us to stay in closer connection with another person. Reflecting on your own experience of close relationships and times in which you feel hurt or anxious, to what extent do you use each of the following strategies to disconnect from others (when you might be better off staying in connection)?
