

Quick Guide: Credit Lines

Standard In-text Citation Format

Unless otherwise requested by the rights holder, credit lines should follow APA style.

Example source and formatting for various situations:

Kossinets, G., and Watts, D.J. (2009). Origins of homophily in an evolving social network. American Journal of Sociology, 115. 405–50. doi:10.1086/599247.

| Situation                      | Example                                                            |
|--------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------|
| In-text Citation               | (Kossinets & Watts, 2009)                                          |
| Fair Use Credit Line           | Kossinets & Watts (2009).                                          |
| Fair Use & Adapted Credit Line | Adapted from Kossinets & Watts (2009).                             |
| Based On Credit Line           | Based on data from Kossinets & Watts (2009).                       |
| Licensed Use Credit Line       | Kossinets & Watts (2009). Reproduced with permission.              |
| Licensed & Adapted Credit Line | Adapted from Kossinets & Watts (2009). Reproduced with permission. |

For more information about APA style, see the following link: <http://www.apastyle.org/>

Creative Commons Credit Line

When using CC content, always include proper attribution. This is important because failing to properly cite the source puts us in violation of the license terms and subject to copyright infringement claims.

Always provide the following:

- Full source info
- Name the license
- Source location link/url
- Link/url to the terms of the license

Example of proper citation:

Photo of Ceiling frescos in Sonntagberg Basilica by Daniel Gran,

https://commons.wikimedia.org/wiki/Main\_Page#/media/File:Sonntagberg\_Basilika\_Deckenfresken\_03.JPG, licensed under CC BY-SA 4.0 <http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-sa/4.0/>.

Public Domain Credit Lines

While Public Domain material is not subject to copyright protection, it is still necessary to give proper attribution for work that is not original. In all cases, a credit line should be included that provide as much source info as possible. Simply indicating “Public Domain” as a credit line is not sufficient.

Photo Credit Lines

Credit lines for images licensed via photo vendors should adhere to the terms of the license. Typically, vendors specify a particular format which includes the individual photo credit, the library or collection the image belongs to as well as the name of the vendor. Additionally, the credit line must appear immediately adjacent to the image in the text.

Social Media

Social media posts should be cited/credited in text with the full source information listed in the references. <http://blog.apastyle.org/apastyle/2013/10/how-to-cite-social-media-in-apa-style.html?ga=2.108470786.1444560830.1496677086-942583714.1496677086>