

Test-retest reliability: extent to which people tend to score similarly on a measurement that is completed at two different points in time.